The Old Man and the Sea PDF

In the 'The Old Man and the Sea', the writer narrates about the struggle of an old, professional fisherman for the best catch of his life.

Santiago, a matured fisherman from Cuba, went out for fishing but returned with empty hands for eighty-four days. Due to this unfortunate situation, the elders of his young and sincere companion and student, Manolin, have instructed him to search for some other successful fisherman instead of assisting Santiago. Even then, Manolin looks after him upon his arrival every night. He enables the old man to haul his fishing gear, prepares food for him. And updates him about the American baseball and his favorite hero, Joe DiMaggio. Santiago has faith that one day his unlucky period will end soon, so this time he prepares to sail out far away.

As per his commitment, Santiago leaves the island's shallow waters and enters into the Gulf Stream, on the 85th day of his unfortunate period. He prepares his fishing line and drops six-hundred-foot deep in water. At twelve, Santiago feels that some big fish, that may be marlin, holds the bait. He successfully hooks the fish but cannot haul it in the boat, instead Santiago pulled by fish.

In a fear that fish would lose the line, he is not able to attach the line with the boat. So, old man bears all pressure of fishing line on his shoulders, hands, and back prepared to give slack when fish makes a run. The fish keep pulling his boat for two days and nights in the northwest direction until it tires and swims in the east with the boat. During all this time, fishing line cause pain and badly hurts Santiago especially when fish thrusts, jump or eagerly try for freedom. In spite of all pain and efforts, the old man offers appreciation for the marlin and refers him as his brother.

The effort of continuous two days tired the fish, so a restless Santiago manages to pull the fish so close that he kills it with a spear. Then he observed that it is the biggest fish he ever was seen. He sets his sail towards home. He feels happy when counting the market value of marlin, but he is more concerned that people are not worthy to eat this great fish.

Answer Key and Interesting Information From This Quiz The protagonist of this tale is an old Cuban fisherman who goes fishing every day, despite his terrible luck (fish-wise, that is). What is this old man's name? However, he is usually referred to in the book as "the old man". The old man looks up especially to one certain baseball player. What baseball player was this? Though the legend never actually appears in the book, DiMaggio plays an important part in "The Old Man and the Sea" as Santiago often compares his hardships to DiMaggio's bone spur, sympathizes with his fisherman father and refers to him as "the great DiMaggio". The old man lives all by himself in a shabby shack... but it was not always so. He once had a wife. What happened to the old man's wife? The only reason we know Santiago had a wife in the first place is that he has a tinted photograph of her which he keeps hidden as it makes him sad to see it. In all the village, the old man only has one true friend: a young boy. The old man and the boy once fished together, but the boy's parents made him stop and fish in another boat because they said the old man was "salao", which means what? The worst form of unlucky Manolin (the boy) did not want to leave Santiago, but, as he said himself, he was just a boy and had to obey his parents. Santiago understood and they continued being close friends even though Manolin fished with a very successful fishing skiff while Santiago went day after day without catching much of anything. What was the boy's name? However, much like Santiago is called "the old man", Manolin is mainly referred to as "the boy". One day in September, just like any other day, the old man goes out fishing in the wee hours of the morning. After a while, he catches a an "albacore" (tuna), and then he hooks THE fish: the great marlin. At what time of the day did the old man hook the marlin? Santiago hooked the marlin at noon on the "lucky" eighty-fifth day. Land now out of sight, the old man is surprised to see a little bird flying across the water. It rests on his taut fishing line. What kind of bird was it? Santiago was glad for its company and talked a bit to the little bird, but it soon flew away when the fishing line jerked. While hanging on to the line (constantly pulled by the marlin), the old man's hands got cut, burned and, in general, very hurt. One of his hands cramped. Was it his right hand? Santiago never could control his left hand as well as his right. With his hand cramped and the line pulling, he threatened and then pleaded with his disobedient hand to cooperate, which it eventually did. Darkness falls, and another day begins. The old man sees the marlin for the first time and is stunned by its length. He catches various smaller fish and eats them raw to sustain his strength. Again, darkness falls and another day begins. Finally, the fish slows down and the old man is able to stab it, kill it, and tie it fast to his skiff. And then the sharks started coming. Did the sharks leave anything at all from the great marlin? Though the sharks did eat nearly every bit of the marlin, they did leave the spinal cord and the head. What is the very last line in "The Old Man and the Sea"? The old man was dreaming about the lions. We learn early on in the book that Santiago no longer dreams of storms, women, great occurrences, great fish, fights, contests of strength, his wife or of the boy, but that he "only dreamed of places now and of the lions on the beach". this quiz is about The Old Man and the Sea Best summary PDF, themes, and quotes. From waiters running around like whirling dervishes, to giant pitchers of fresh squeezed lemonade, and so many vibrant salads you won't even need a main course (though you must try the grilled chicken, fish and kebabs), a weekend brunch at the port is worth braving the long line. Don't fret, it moves fast, and the fare is worth it. While the inside is cool on a hot day, we suggest braving the heat and eating port-side for the full experience. Throw in warm oven baked pita bread, and complimentary coffee/tea and tiny balls of honey-glazed goodness for dessert, and you'll never want to leave
